REMARKS ON THE POLICY OF RUSSIA.

From the Moniteur.

We know that no war upon the continent can be seriously undertaken without Prussia or Austria becoming partizans in it; and these powers are not to be told that they often commence a war with allies, and finish it without them: that the subsidies they receive are barely sufficient to defray a fourth of their expences; and that among neighboring powers, acquainted with each other, the consequences of war are terrible, and to which they will not expose themselves without good, cogent and indispensable reasons. Russia herself can effect nothing against France, but with her assistance, she may become every thing good and great.

"Will she a second time send 20,000 men to make a new debarkation to Holland? Will she disembark 60,000 men upon the Weser to attack the French in Hanover? The result to Russia would be the loss of a great number of men, and the inevitable weakening of the empire, but would be truly advantageous to the powers on the confines of Russia; they would willingly see her wasting her armies in contending against France, and suffering in her turn, all the inconveniences which Austria has so long sustained alone.

"Will she send 30 or 40,000 men into Ireland to defend that country against French invasion? By doing so, what credit shall she obtain in the eyes of the universe, thus becoming an auxiliary and a subaltern? Besides, what interest has she in augmenting the British power? Can she be ignorant that the sea bathes every shore, and that England, who rules over the sea, may also appear before Cronstadt to dictate law to Russia? On the other hand, Russia has nothing to fear from France; nature has destined these two powers to be friends; and whatever evil direction passion may give to their armies, no great interest will ever attend the undertakings of either power.

"Men of small experience may deceive themselves in neglecting to acknowledge incontestible truths; but ministers, grown grey in the public service, as there are many in Russia; or a prince only directed by liberal opinions, with an enlightened love of his subjects, and sentiments of his real grandeur, cannot be misled for any length of time.

"Passion and misunderstanding, fomented by artful and malevolent men may lead to hazardous and inconvenient measures on either side; to the suspension of all communication, and even to the making of war, but a misunderstanding cannot be durable between nations which are necessarily brought back to recollection by the sentiments of their respective strength, their mutual and perfect independence necessarily leading to a disposition for moderation and the public desire of peace.

"When a power whose capital is far in the North, & whose armies upon the frontiers of Persia, and Tartary would interfere upon its own account, and on its own risk in the affairs of the South of Europe, even then it quits its proper sphere. However powerful monarchs may be, and however brave their soldiers, they are but men. they cannot exert themselves beyond the limits marked out by the nature of things.

"Russia when taking a part in the affairs of the South of Europe, must either support one of the three great powers, Austria, Prussia, or France, and thus she acts according to the interest of her local situation, which renders her truly respectable. But if on the contrary she intermeddles with the affairs of the South without the assistance of either of those powers, she is wanting to the consideration of her own greatness, which to increase does not require provinces, but men; these might elevate her to a pitch superior to the other powers.

One year's war would destroy more men than many years duration of peace could produce. A lasting peace is therefore the most certain means of satisfying the ambition of Russia, and the propogation of the species one of the most pressing of its exigencies.

"We therefore cannot persuade ourselves to believe that the Russians will make a debarkation in Italy; in fact, were they to land there with ten times the force, they would be all lost men.

LONDON, Aug 1.

The Queen Charlotte Packet.

We have in a former paper noticed the French account of the contest which preceded the loss of the Queen Charlotte, packet, captain Mudge on the 10th of May last, on her passage from Halifax to Falmouth.——We have now an opportunity of laying before our readers a more circumstantial detail of that action, so honorable to captain Mudge, his officers and men, with which we have been favored by an officer of that ship, as follows:

"At 7 in the morning, of the 16th of May, 1805, in lat. 48 N. long. 11, 20, W. we discovered a sail on the lee bow, standing to the N. W. She fetched so near us, that we could plainly perceive her to be a brig cruiser, and that of an enemy. At 9 she tacked, and stood after us; at noon she got so near that it was thought best to shorten sail, and bring her to action; with a view of cutting away her masts, or rigging, previous arrangements for that purpose having been made. A few minutes after, we got very near to each other; when an exceeding hot fire commenced on both sides with round, grape and musquetry, and was continued for one hour and fifty-five minutes, the whole time not out of the range of pistol shot. The Queen Charlotte being now a perfect wreck and quite ungovernable, we were under the painful necessity of sinking the mail, and striking our colors, to the privateer brig of war L'Hirondelle, of Dunkirk, mounting 16 long carriage guns and a crew of 110 men, captain Allemas. The damage we sustained before we surrendered was as follows: 3 guns on the side engaged disabled, one from shot, and the other two, which were cannonades, and very bad guns in action, recoiling, they being very badly constructed; jibstay, halyards and out-hauler; fore topmast staysail, stay and halyards; fore and fore top bowlines, fore tacks and sheet, foot of the fore sail in two places, fore top gallant and fore topsail ties, and fore and one fore topsail brace, and one sheet, one main brace, both topsail braces and bowlines, topgallant tye, cross-jack braces and bowlines, peer halyards and both topping-lifts, all the bobstays, three fore shrouds on the engaging side, all the topmast shrouds, and one back-stay, one topmast shroud and one back-stay on the other side, two main shrouds and one of the topmast shrouds, and all the back stays on the engaging side, and on the other, one lower shroud and two topmast shrouds, the mizen rigging much cut: the foremast had five round shot quite through it, and sticking in it, the main mast much damaged, and the mizen mast much more so; with several shot which struck the hull. The privateer had several shot in her hull, and the foremast badly wounded, sails and rigging very much cut, but none of her head sails come down; she had nine principal officers on board and 25 experienced soldiers at small arms. The captain of her, and the crew, for the most part, are Flemings, who, I understand, have been employed in the smuggling trade.

The Queen Charlotte had on board 24 of her own crew, one distressed subject and 14 invalids from Halifax, debilitated from paralisis, age and long service, but their hearts were good, and they behaved with true English courage. Our captain was well supported by his officers and the men behaved very well. The Queen Charlotte had 1 man killed, and 4 slightly wounded. L'Hirondelle had the pilot and 2 others killed, and 2 very badly and 4 slightly wounded. Her damage is such, that it will occasion her some time to remain in port and refit. The French captain treated captain Mudge, his officers and crew very honorably while on board."

There is reason to believe that the Queen Charlotte was lost for want of being better armed. The carronades now used in the packets are unfit for long action. When they get warm, they recoil so violently as to break their breachings, tackles, &c. and much time is consequently lost in repairing the mischief. Had the packet been armed with proper guns, she would doubtless have been preserved, and might probably have captured the enemy.

From the REPERTORY.

NEUTRAL COMMERCE.

The subject of the following Communication has of late excited much feeling and public animadversion. We insert it with satisfaction, as we deem the sentiment both seasonable and correct.

The commercial treaty concluded by president Washington with Great Britain, has been suffered by president Jefferson to expire. Our merchants are beginning to learn experimentally, the wisdom of managing a prodigious proportion of our commercial affairs with that nation on the ground of leaving unsettled and in dispute, almost every principle and rule for its management. Yet this is the anti-treaty merit of Mr. Jefferson. We may presume that an ignorant clamor against the British treaty has made our Solomons in council somewhat shy of making another and probably one not quite so good as Mr. Jay's, which was certainly an excellent one, for while we yielded nothing, we secured our peace, honor, and interest.

We now trade with the British dominions on the footing of many gratuities and favors that from a regard to her own policy and not from any regard to us, she allows, and also on the footing of the general law of nations. Every one will discern, in a moment, that both these grounds are somewhat precarious. In respect to the law of nations we are in no little danger of having that prescribed to us from Doctors Commons, with such an extension of restriction of its principles, as the pressure of the war may render acceptable or convenient to Great Britain. Our interest and our displeasure will not avail much and with a chief who thinks all war wrong and unjustifiable, and the "least competent naval force" always the best, our power will be as little cared for as our rights.

It is not intended to say that the views of Great Britain are hostile, or that sir William Scott's Court is not highly reputable.* But a party, and the strongest party ought not to be left to judge alone in his own cause, and this is precisely what G. Britain will do and must do as long as her assumed principles of decision are admitted to operate without a treaty. How our administration can make a "dd British treaty," and how their decent and wise supporters can refrain from "kicking it to *, if they do, is more than we can determine. The necessity of doing something stares them in the face.

The views of Great Britain most certainly are not hostile; so much the more encouragement for treating. But they most certainly are rigid, if not incorrect. We believe the interdiction in time of war of all the intercourse with an enemy's colonies that was not permited in time of peace to be justified, will require no little straining of authorities. We also believe that usage in every former war has not been extended so far and practice is a good interpreter of the extent as well as nature of a doubtful principle. We will affirm that these opinions are sufficiently examined, but it is the business of government to examine them; and if they are not unfriendly to the commerce that enlarges the "great sores" of the state, which indeed is more than suspected, they will do something efficient for its protection.

Great Britain is so situated, that she would do what is right, or nearly so, in respect to the exercise of her naval supremacy. She certainly will not yield the point that free goods and we should be worse than fools to insist upon it. We get ten times as much profit by her rejecting that quack principle of the French, unknown to the maratime law, as we should by her unreserved admission of it.

But her late decisions, restricting the commerce of the United States with enemies, is too serious to be readily or indeed to be ever conceded by our government. Such rigid restrictions might further distress her enemy; but they would prodigiously abridge the fair, usual, and as it is believed lawful profits of American trade. Situated as we are and interested as Great Britain herself is in our prosperity, we think a negociator as able as Mr. Jay, if such could be found among the friends of the administration, we know they have not his equal among them, would represent with force and effect that we cannot abandon this ground and that Great Britain is concerned both in policy and justice to ascertain it, and with some essential relaxations of its rigor.

If negociation amicably and temperately conducted should fail, nevertheless we ought to make the attempt, we ought to remonstrate against the principles assumed; and if dire necessity should involve the honor of the country in question, it is hoped there is not a federalist who would not cheerfully support any administration that would put all at hazard rather than to sacrifice that. We ought to treat in the spirit of friendship and with a sincere desire that Great Britain may maintain her dignity, independence and greatness against France. Even in case of war, we ought to refuse to associate ourselves with France, whose friendship is death to republics.

A negociation in this temper and with this courage would certainly succeed.

* The late sentence of Judge Scott, which involves the principle, that property being bro't from an enemy's colony by a neutral, and reshipped in the same vessel to an enemy's country, is liable to condemnation!

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.

Arrived, brig Rajah, Smith, from Nevetas, (Cuba.)

Left, the brig Lioness, Carson, just arrived from New York, aground 12 miles below the town; and brig Charlotte of Providence, arrived the 4th Sept. from Philadelphia.

Sailed in company, the schooner Hector, Avery, for New York, parted from her on the 12th instant, off Cape Florida.

On the 31st of July, the schooner Mary, Robinson, of New York, after putting her cargo into store, was taken out of the port of Nævetas by a Providence privateer, and carried to New Providence with a part of her outward cargo, as well as part of that taken out in the Rajah, which they took from the store, supposing the property to be Spanish.

Captain Smith met 2 French privateers going into Nævetas, having as prize, a British ship of 8 guns, dismasted, which, they said, was bound from Philadelphia for Jamaica.

The above privateersmen informed, that a British packet bound to Jamaica, had been recently captured by a French privateer, and sent into St. Jago de Cuba.

Alexandria Daily Advertiser.

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 1.

It was yesterday reported, says the New Orleans Gazette, August 3, and this morning we are told from a correct source, that the late Spanish Intendant Morales, has received orders from his court to sell all the vacant lands in East and W. Florida, and it is said sale will be immediately made even of lands within the boundary claimed by the U. States.

Captain Smith, of the brig Rajah, informs, that on the 12th of Aug. 2 British privateers came into the port of Naevetas, and burnt the town. The guard house, store and two or three private dwellings escaped the conflagration.

(N. Y. paper.)

Capt. Davis, from Bordeaux, informs, that on the 14th instant, in lat. 42, 20, long. 58, he saw five sail of men of war, two of which appeared to be ships of the line, standing to the Southward, with the wind at East.

(Ibid.)

From the Salem Gazette of Sept. 24.

FROM GIBRALTAR.

Captain Israel Williams, who arrived last evening from the Mediterranean, has obliged us with some minutes of intelligence which he had collected. He left Gibraltar the 23d of August; previous to which, they had no certain accounts of lord Nelson; the report, however, was, that he arrived at Ferrol 2 days before the combined fleets, and not finding them there, had gone back to Newfoundland in quest of them. Neither had they any particular account of the action between admiral Calder and the combined fleets: the official account of the Spanish admiral was published, and stated that they had gained a victory over the British, which would have been more complete if the French had not unfortunately been too far to leeward which brought the whole blunt of the battle upon the Spaniards: finding that 2 Spanish and 1 French ship were missing, he gave over pursuing the English, and informs that the fleet, though much dispersed, had arrived safe, part at Vigo and part at Ferrol.

Captain W. informs, that a few days after the action the combined fleets formed a junction at Ferrol, and with the squadron in that port, sailed for Cadiz, where they had arrived, 30 in number, two days before the Friendship's sailing, and with 5 ships in that port, formed a fleet of 35 sail of the line. This intelligence was received at Gibraltar 8 hours before capt. W. sailed, together with a further account that the Carthagena squadron, of 8 sail of the line (the same that was to have joined the Toulon squadron when bound down the Straits, but was not ready) had arrived at Malaga, 20 leagues from Gibraltar only. Just before sunset (says captain W.) an easterly wind sprung up, with which the Carthagena squadron probably started, as they were in plain sight from the rock some time before dark, 8 sail of the line and many gunboats: this created a most serious alarm at Gibraltar; all was bustle; the alarm guns were constantly firing, which were heard on board his ship till ten o'clock at night, at which time the wind had increased to a very strong Levanter, and the night being very dark, it must have given them a fine chance to pass the Gut.

At the time the alarm was given, the squadron under sir R. Bickerton, was at anchor in Gibraltar bay, consisting of the Queen of 98 guns, Tonant 84, Minotaur, and Belle-rophon, 74's, 2 frigates and two gun brigs. This squadron had been some time waiting at Gibraltar for reinforcements from England, to go up and blockade the Carthagena squadron above mentioned. Immediately after the alarm, the squadron got under weigh, it was said to join the squadron off Cadiz, under sir Roger Curtis, who according to some accounts, had twelve sail, and according to others 8 sail of the line.

Captain W. was informed by the American consul, and other gentlemen at Gibraltar, that a war between Spain and America, appeared inevitable, and that the Spaniards were in daily expectation of war being declared against them by the United States. Mr. Pinckney, whose negociation had failed, was expected at Tangier every moment, and Mr. BOWDOIN had thought it expedient not to proceed to Madrid, as we have before known. In the mean time the Spaniards treat these things with contempt and insult, and capture the American flag daily, and the common observation is that our government cannot much longer brook such hostile and insulting treatment.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman in the suite of Col. Hammond to his friend in Augusta, (Geo.)

KASKASKIAS, Eastern side of the Mississippi, Indiana territory, July 15, 1805.

On Sunday last I arrived at this place in company with col. Hammond after one of the most fatiguing journies perhaps ever performed through a country which might be said to be settled with Christians.

The vicissitudes which we have met with are almost innumerable. We have now come as well as I can be informed by my Journal and other information about 850 miles, and were 46 days out to this place.

There very few parts of the western country I admire, the land is either mountainous or low and flat, the high land is healthy and there is excellent water, but the manner in which it lies, makes it difficult to cultivate. The low land is extremely fertile, all kinds of grain growing luxuriently; the water however is intolerably bad. The only tract of country which seems desirable to settle in, is Cumberland tract, Gallatin, from which I last wrote you.

There are vast numbers of prairies in this territory, they are level plains of from 2 to 12 miles square scarce a twig or switch to be cut off them; grass grows to a great height; early of a morning just as the sun dawns from the eastern hills it gives the prairies a beautiful appearance, and there being nothing but green grass, a diversity of flowers, with now and then a little clump of oaks; the prospect is always picturesque; always beautiful or grand. This country is badly watered; hence people are deterred from settling in the interior, and an act of Congress preventing slavery prevents emigrants, particularly those of opulence; it seems more than probable, that it will be years before there will be refinement of manners, or that the arts and sciences will flourish here.

But a man who travels should leave all his prejudices behind him, and not write his friend any thing but what is correct. I must do these French the justice to say, that I believe they are much more honest and peaceable than the Americans, who are settled here, and who are mostly idle and dissipated. Indeed the Americans of this place seem to look upon a stranger as one whom they shall never see again, and think themselves priviledged to pluck him. This place (Kaskaskias) was settled two years before Philadelphia, and the first bell ever imported in America, I have seen hanging in the Roman church---although this place is now so desolate, it was once settled by a number of French of the first character & fortune. To see the low standing chimnies and large buildings tumbling into ruin makes me feel considerable regret, and must fill any person of sensibility with awe. The only tribe of Indians here are the Kaskaskias they are about 100 in number; & live in huts in the suburbs. I have just returned from seeing them, where I set a squaw to make me a pair of mockasins.—— They can produce about 40 or 50 warriors; are small Indians and seem to be in a miserable situation. On Tuesday last colonel Hammond, set out for St. Louis leaving Mrs. Hammond at col. Edgar's---our waggons and horses are about four miles out of town, at a place we got to rest the horses and recruit the negroes.

Gen. Wilkinson passed through here a few days before our arrival and arrived at St. Louis on the 4th inst. The troops, citizens, and several hundred Indians, were drawn out and stationed at the foot of a high bridge where the general had to pass, for to salute him on his arrival, with direction, from the commanding officer not to fire a salute till he had crossed the bridge. But just as the general and his escort had got on the top of a bridge 30 or 40 feet high they commenced a fire, which together with the yells of the Indians, threw the general corps and the officers, &c. escorting him, into a general confusion; several had like to have been tossed off the bridge, but it is with pleasure I learned no accident of consequence had happened.

Loaf sugar 75 cts. per lb.
Brown do. 1 dollar per lb.
Tea and coffee none.

It was with difficulty the citizens could procure a few of these articles at St. Louis, for the entertainment given general Wilkinson, on his arrival: they had to give one dollar a pound for a barrel of brown sugar, which was all that was to be had in that city. I have not tasted tea or coffee for many weeks past.

Just as I was closing this letter, I received accounts from colonel Hammond, at St. Louis, he informs us, he has rented a house, and intends being with us here tomorrow. I omitted mentioning to you, that we are a near neighbor to Mr. Bell, formerly of your city; he is much dissatisfied with this territory, and will leave this early in October next, for Georgia; the old gentleman is much respected here.

From the BOSTON CENTINEL.

☞ A RICH VEIN of MORALITY runs through the following production.

THE GRAVE.

There is a calm for those who weep,
A rest for weary pilgrims found;
They softly lie, and sweetly sleep,
Low in the ground.

The storm that wrecks the winter sky,
No more disturbs their sweet repose
Than summer evening's latest sigh,
That shuts the rose.

I long to lay this painful head,
And aching heart beneath the soil,
To slumber in that dreamless bed
From all my toil.

For Misery stole me at my birth,
And cast me helpless on the wild;
I perish;——O my mother earth!
Take home thy child.

On thy dear lap these limbs reclin'd
Shall gently moulder into thee,
Nor leave one wretched trace behind,
Resembling me.

Hark! a strange sound affrights mine ear;
My pulse; my brain runs wild; I rave:
—Ah! who art thou, whose voice I hear?
"I am THE GRAVE!

"The GRAVE, that never spake before,
Hath found at length a tongue to chide:
O listen! I will speak no more:
Be silent, Pride!

"Art thou a WRETCH, of hope forlorn,
The victim of consuming care?
Is thy distracted conscience torn
By fell despair?

"Do fool misdeeds of former times
Wring with remorse thy guilty breast?
And Ghosts of unforgiven crimes
Murder thy rest?

"Lash'd by the furies of the mind,
From wrath and vengeance would'st thou flee,
Ah! think not, hope not, Fool! to find
A friend in me.

"By all the terrors of the tomb,
Beyond the powers of tongue to tell!
By the dread secrets of my womb!
By Death and Hell!

"I charge the LIVE! Repent and pray;
In dust thine infamy deplore;
There yet is mercy! go thy way,
And sin no more.

"Art thou a mourner? Hast thou known
The joy of innocent delights?
Endearing days forever flown
And tranquil nights?

"O LIVE! and deeply cherish still
The sweet remembrance of the past;
Rely on heaven's unchanging will
For peace at last.

"Art thou a WANDERER? Hast thou seen
O'erwhelming tempests drown thy bark?
A shipwreck'd sufferer has thou been,
Misfortune's mark?

"Though long, of winds and waves the sport,
Condemned in wretchedness to roam,
LIVE! thou shalt reach a sheltering port,
A quiet home.

"To Friendship didst thou trust thy fame,
And was thy friend a deadly foe,
Who stole into thy breast to aim
A surer blow?

"LIVE! and repine not o'er his loss,
A loss unworthy to be told:
Thou hast mistaken fordid dross
For friendship's gold.

"Go, seek that treasure, seldom found,
Of power the fiercest griefs to calm,
And soothe the bosom's deepest wound
With heavenly balm.

"In WOMAN has thou plac'd thy bliss,
And did the Fair One faithless prove?
Hath she betray'd thee with a kiss,
And sold thy love?

"LIVE! 'twas a false bewild'ring fire?
Too often love's insidious dart
Thrills the fond soul with sweet desire,
But kills the heart.

"A nobler flame shall warm thy breast,
A brighter maiden's virtuous charms!
Blest shalt thou be, supremely blest,
In beauty's arms.

"——— whate'er thy lot—whoe'er thou be,
Confess thy folly, kiss the rod,
And in thy chast'ning sorrows see
The hand of GOD.

"A bruised reed he will not break;
Afflictions all his children feel;
He wounds them for his mercy's sake,
He wounds to heal.

"Humbled beneath his mighty hand,
Prostrate, his Providence adore:
'Tis done!—Arise! He bids thee stand,
To fall no more.

"Now, Traveller in the vale of tears,'
To realms of everlasting light,
Through time's dark wilderness of years,
Pursue thy flight.

"There is a calm for those who weep,
A rest for weary Pilgrims found.
And while the mouldering ashes sleep,
Low in the ground.

"The Soul, of origin divine,
GOD's glorious image freed from clay,
In Heaven's eternal sphere shall shine,
A star of day!

"The SUN is but a spark of fire,
A transient meteor in the sky,
The SOUL, immortal as its sire,
SHALL NEVER DIE."

DIED on Thursday evening last, after a fortnight's severe illness, Mr. CHARLES WAYMAN, of Georgetown.

His Funeral was attended by a large and respectable portion of the inhabitants of George Town and the City, to the Protestant Episcopal Church, where an affecting and impressive discourse was delivered by the reverend Mr. Balch.

The memory of a departed fellow mortal has rarely been honored with more poignant grief or more numerous mourners—There are few of our citizens who will not feel the loss of a man of activity and enterprise, cut off in the bloom of life and usefulness—There are none who will not regret the death of one possessed of every quality which constitutes the MAN OF WORTH.

The most amiable manners, the kindest dispositions and warm benevolence of his heart, had drawn around him an extensive circle of friends, and tightened the "natural bonds of brotherhood" which attached him to his afflicted kindred.

The anguish of these is the best proof of his value, and evinces that this last tribute, though prompted by friendship, is due from justice to his merits.

Taxes of every kind on all the said property are fully paid up to include 1805.

We will treat with any person for any of the property at private sale; judgment creditors of the deceased, and also against him where bound for our brother Thomas J.
